

“The CRH safety best practice events were run across Europe and provided an opportunity for senior colleagues to collectively come together across multiple countries and companies with a common goal of discussing the most significant risks in the CRH business.”

Sharing Best Practice

When it comes to our safety culture, we are determined to keep high standards across our business. Tarmac is committed to achieving zero harm through our ethos of ‘Work Safe Home Safe’, with its emphasis on continuous improvement, and a culture that places the health and wellbeing of our people and all other interested parties at the centre of what we do.

In May 2024, Tarmac attended safety best practice sharing events hosted by our parent company CRH. These events brought together 130 people from across CRH’s UK businesses in five locations up and down the country, providing a valuable platform for exchanging knowledge and insights on common health and safety problems.

Groups had centrally collected best practice shared with them and facilitated conversations were held to share more solutions to common Health and Safety problems. It is important that we continue to drive continuous health and safety improvements across our business, to reduce incidents and achieve zero harm, and sharing best practice within Tarmac but also across CRH will help us to do this.

Wayne Darwin, HSEQ assurance & governance & national businesses Manager, said: “The event provided opportunities for colleagues to share knowledge and experiences in a constructive way and bring to life the requirements of the CRH Life Saving Rules. The event will run again in 2025, and we will look to further extend the opportunities for engagement across multiple businesses in order to achieve a safer workplace for all.”
